Strands of Strength is an organization that provides vouchers for those with difficulty paying for a wig. There are several salons that participate in this program and are marked by * in the above list.

The American Cancer Society also has wig vouchers for those who qualify.

Your insurance company may cover the expense of a wig. If you have that benefit, you can purchase a wig from a salon and submit the receipt to your insurance company for reimbursement. Medicare and Medicaid do not cover wigs.

Cold caps, also referred to as “scalp hypothermia,” may be worn during chemotherapy to reduce the risk of hair loss. They require that a partner be present to change out the caps. Hall-Perrine Cancer Center’s Infusion Center has a freezer available for use in keeping the special ice packs cold during treatment. Speak with your physician or nurse for more information.

The information included on this flyer does not serve as an endorsement. It is simply a list of local providers we have been made aware of and are providing as a convenience to our patients.
